

American Forests' Walkabout: Central Park's North Woods

Join American Forests on an interpretive walk through Central Park's lesser known North Woods! The walk will be led by a trained park guide, and participants will experience and learn about the abundant biodiversity within this part of Central Park.

Date: Sunday, April 6th 2014

Time: 10:00 am – 12:00 pm

Location: Exact meet up location will be provided upon receipt of your RSVP for this event.

Special Guest: Regina Alvarez, former Director of Horticulture and Woodland Management for the Central Park Conservancy.

Hike Details: Visit Central Park's North Woods – a woodland designed to be reminiscent of the Adirondacks! During our walk we will look at native and non-native plants and animals, and how the park is managed for wildlife habitat. We will discover the Blockhouse, the oldest building in the park and the only remaining fortification of many that were built in 1814. We will walk along a stream and enjoy waterfalls, bridges, tunnels and wildlife.

For more information on this event or to RSVP, please email Jillian Hanelly, Individual Giving Manager at American Forests, at jhanelly@americanforests.org